Licence to publish

The Institution of Structural Engineers must obtain your agreement prior to publishing the material. The corresponding author may sign on behalf of all authors, or each author may sign individually.

You as author/s hereby grant to The Institution of Structural Engineers, as the publisher of the material, a non-exclusive, perpetual, worldwide, royalty-free licence both to reproduce and distribute your material ourselves, throughout the world, in printed, electronic or any other medium, and in turn to authorise representatives of The Institution of Structural Engineers to do the same.

You agree that we may publish the article (titled below) in The Structural Engineer, and that we may sell or distribute it within The Structural Engineer, on its own or with other related material.

You warrant that:

- the material is original and that it has not been published (nor is it being considered for publication by any other party) at the time of signature
- to the best of your knowledge and belief the material contains nothing which is obscene, blasphemous, libellous or obtained directly or indirectly in breach of confidence or is otherwise objectionable
- the material does not infringe the copyright or any other rights of any person
- you have obtained all necessary permissions for the reuse of any/all third-party content (including but not limited to text, data and imagery) from the copyright owner/s
- and/or where you have not been granted permission, you have alerted the Institution to these instances, prior to publication (refer to p.2 of this licence)
