Licence to publish

If you (or any of your co-authors) are not members of the Institution at the point of publication, we must obtain your/their agreement prior to publishing the material.

As the publisher of the material, you as author/s hereby grant to The Institution of Structural Engineers an exclusive, perpetual, worldwide, royalty-free licence both to reproduce and distribute your material ourselves, throughout the world, in printed, electronic or any other medium, and in turn to authorise representatives of The Institution of Structural Engineers to do the same.

You agree that we may publish the article (titled below) in The Structural Engineer, and that we may sell or distribute it within The Structural Engineer, on its own or with other related material.

You warrant that:

- the material is original and that it has not been published (nor is it being considered for publication by any other party) at the time of signature
- to the best of your knowledge and belief the material contains nothing which is obscene, blasphemous, libellous or obtained directly or indirectly in breach of confidence or is otherwise objectionable
- the material does not infringe the copyright or any other rights of any person
